Bayes 250 Week ◆ Sponsor Recognition

We recognize and gratefully acknowledge the generous financial support received from several organizations and co-sponsors of the Bayes 250 Day, the EFaB@Bayes250 Workshop, and the O-Bayes 2013 Workshop.

Duke University, supporting Bayes 250 events through the offices of the Provost, the Vice Provost for Research, the Dean of Arts & Sciences, the Dean of Natural Sciences, the Dean of the Graduate School, the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering, and the Department of Statistical Science.

The International Society for Bayesian Analysis (ISBA), together with the ISBA Section on Economics, Finance & Business, and the ISBA Section on Objective Bayes, providing participant and administrative support.

The US National Science Foundation, providing substantial financial support to subsidize participation of students and new researchers.

SAMSI and NISS, supporting the participation of students and new researchers from affiliate organizations.

The BEST Foundation, supporting the participation of students and junior researchers via travel awards, and a BEST-EFaB Research Award made based on posters and/or oral presentations by junior researchers in the EFaB@Bayes 250 Workshop.

IBM Research, funding the IBM-EFaB Student Research Award, made based on posters presented by students in the EFaB@Bayes 250 Workshop.

Google, supporting participation costs for students and junior researchers to be recognized as designated Google Scholars.

Charles Schwab, supporting participation costs, especially for students and junior researchers.

Publishers Chapman & Hall/CRC Press, Oxford University Press, and Springer, supporting all Bayes 250 events, with OUP also sponsoring the OUP-EFaB Research Prize for junior/student EFaB@Bayes 250 Workshop participants.